

Haven't we met before?

Last Updated Friday, 18 August 2006

Haven't we met before? I remember you. Isn't it time to click on the button? Anyway, I want to tell you that once upon a happy time there was non such thing as an income tax. Some Americans became so rich they didn't know how to spend their money. Did they give it to charity? Ha, ha. Well, actually a few did give quite a lot to charity, but what they all did was to build fabulous live-like-a-king mansions with lots and lots of servants - up to 40 or more. Can you believe that? It's true.

Haven't we met before? I remember you. Isn't it time to click on the button? Anyway, I want to tell you that once upon a happy time there was non such thing as an income tax. Some Americans became so rich they didn't know how to spend their money. Did they give it to charity? Ha, ha. Well, actually a few did give quite a lot to charity, but what they all did was to build fabulous live-like-a-king mansions with lots and lots of servants - up to 40 or more.

Can you believe that? It's true. That's just a peek at one story in a new book by H.C. Cowen, and there are almost 200 more stories in this same new book: "GRANDPA HENRY SPILLS THE BEANS" Other stories are about famous swindles, junk science, creativity, corruption, old jokes, lucky numbers, indiscretions, giant ants, health tips, forgotten heroes, crazy laws and crazy wars, etc, etc, etc. See for yourself. Click on this green button to download the book into your home or office at a special internet price of only $9.87 - a $20.00 saving off the regular book rate. I'm Will Scott -- Enjoy! P.S. Grandpa Henry's book has an extra large page size with over 200 pages, and is loaded with all kinds of valuable information.